ROMANCE OF A LIFE.

The Story of Lady Ellenborough— An English Lady Weds an Arab Chief. Mrs. Isabel Burton writes under date of Trieste, March 18th, to the Pall Mall Gazette: Will you allow me to contradict, as the editor of the Triester Zeitung has done here, the correspondent at Beyrout, who writes to the German Gazette of Vienna concerning the late Lady Ellenborough? I scarcely know where to begin, but I must do it to keep my last promise to her. I lived for two years at Damascus while my husband, Captain Burton, was consul there, and in daily intercourse with the subject of this paragraph. Knowing that after her death Mrs. Isabel Burton writes under date agraph. Knowing that after her death all sorts of untraths would appear in the papers very painful to her family—as, indeed, she was not spared while living—she wished me to write her biography, and gave me an hour a day until it was and gave me an hour a day until it was accomplished. She did not spare herself, dictating the bad with the same frankness as the good. I was pledged not to publish this until after her death and that of certain near relatives; but I am in a position to state that there is a grain of truth to a ton of falsehood in the paragraph from Reyrout, and inasmuch as agraph from Beyrout, and inasmuch as Beyrout is only seventy-two miles from Damascus, the writer must know that as well as I do. It must have come from a very common source when such English as this is used: "Between Beyreut and Damascus she got pleased with the camel-driver!" It suggests a discharged lady's maid. I left Damascus, where she met Sheik Mijeval, a remarking considering that he middle of the night, and she was the last friend to see me out of the city. As she wrung my hand, these were her last words: "Do not forget your promise, if I die and we never meet again." I replied: "Iushallab, I shall soon return." She rode a black thorough-bred Arab mare, and, as far as I could see anything in the moonlight, her large, sorrowful, blue eyes, glistening with tears, haunted me. I cannot meddle with the past with mare, and, as far as I could see anything in the moonlight, her large, sorrowful, blue eyes, glistening with tears, haunted me. I cannot meddle with the past without infringing on the biography confided to me, but I can say a few words concerning her life, dating from her arrival in the East, about sixteen years ago, as told me by herself and by those now living there, and I case add my testimony as to what I saw, which I believe will interest every one in England, from the highest downward, and of a gratification to those more nearly concerned. About its sixteen years ago, tired of Europe, Lady Hester Stauhope and Lady Mary Wortley Montagu. (There is also a French lady, Mms. de la Tour de Auvergue, who has built herself a temple on the top of Monat Olivet, and lives there still.)

Lady Ellenborough arrived at Beyrout and went to Damascus, where she arranged to go to Bagdad across the desert. A Bedonin escort for this journey was necessary, and as the Mezrabi tribe occupied the ground the duty of commanding the escort devolved spon Shaykh Mjwal, a young brother of Shaykh Mjwal, a young brother of Shaykh Mjwal, a young brother of Shaykh Mjwal, a young shayk fell in love with this jeantiful woman, who possessed all the qualities that could fire the Arab imagination.
